Dear Philip,

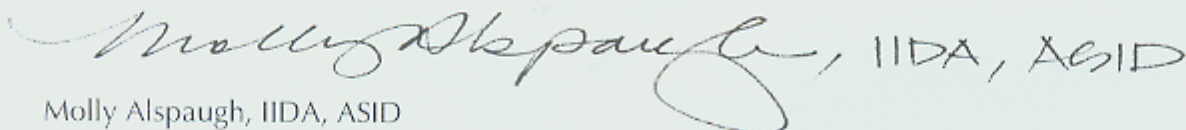

Vanderbilt Children's Hospital turned out better than we imagined. We have numerous companies to thank for that success. We were given a great opportunity to design a world-class children's hospital. We knew we could design it, but we were unsure of whether we had the support of the trades to implement our designs in an economical manner. Waterjet Works helped eliminate our concerns not only on the craftsmanship aspect of the floors, but also from an economic perspective.

That only tells part of the story. As you know, the number of details, and approval drawings was rather large. If ESa didn't have a company like yours who would take the time and interest to understand and support our thinking, we would have had a very different looking project. The floors were an integral part of the overall design and your input, and coordination with James Smith was invaluable.

We now understand how important writing specifications are for the waterjet cutting process. We would probably still be there if hand cutting had been an option. ESa has received numerous accolades on Vanderbilt and we want you to know how much we appreciate all that you did towards the success of the project.

Sincerely,

EARL SWENSSON ASSOCIATES, INC.
